Halcyon

2007

Like life at Swarthmore, it has been a joyful, although admittedly at times arduous, journey creating the book that you hold in front of you, the 2007 Halcyon. I hope that as you look through it you will remember more of the joy than the arduousness. I also hope that you believe, as I do, that all our moments here at Swarthmore, both blissful and trying, were and are precious simply because they are moments shared together.*

Last year we brought you the innovative spaces issue of the Halcyon containing a small taste of color. This year the Halcyon brings you the first ever all color yearbook! And in continuing the tradition of innovative design into 2007, we have attempted to create an emotionally rich and creatively original yearbook weaved together by a film motif and a classic, clean look. I hope that we have succeeded in these respects and that the Halcyon will continue to become an even more creative and innovative publication in the future.

I would like to thank everyone who made this publication possible particularly all the parents who supported us in our senior booster campaign (ads for grads) that made the first ever all color book possible, Jenny Yim and Paury Flowers in the Student Activities Office, Jeff Lott and Phil Stern in the Publications Office, Phil Klein, Brenda Savino, and Dee Skelton at Jostens, Ted Kostans for his wonderful photos, and our editors without whom this book would never have been possible.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Sung Choi', with a stylized flourish at the end.

*Sung Choi
Editor-in-Chief*

One of my favorite professors, someone who dedicated her life to preparing people for careers in education, once said that students needed to know that their teachers cared about them before they could really learn anything from them. Wherever you are as you read this letter and look through this publication, I hope that seeing some familiar faces, settings and landmarks helps you to recall people who care about you, and some of the people, places and activities that mattered to you during your time at Swarthmore.

As I look back on my first year as Dean at Swarthmore, I marvel at how quickly the College came to feel like home for me and for my family, and I want to thank you and your fellow students for that. I also want to thank Bob Gross, my predecessor, for both his friendship and for his good judgment in tapping the Class of 2007 to teach me so much about student life at Swat. After all, it is the energy and enthusiasm of students that makes Swarthmore such a distinctive and magical place — full of joyful possibility and discovery, challenge and support — and the Class of 2007 had an abundance of energy and enthusiasm!

As you look through the photos on the pages that follow, you will see many familiar faces and maybe even a few that are not so familiar. Swarthmore is, after all, a place that is small enough to enable you to meet many people, but not so small that you could meet everybody. Each of the people featured in this publication has their own personal story, and their own Swarthmore experience. As time passes you will meet classmates and other alumni who will know some of what you know, but you will also find that, even among those you felt you knew well, there is still more to know and to learn about each person's story. This is one of the joys of the lifelong association that you have with Swarthmore. And, if per chance you are reading this letter and still have a bit more time to go before you graduate, consider this an invitation to expand your personal network and discover some new things about your classmates before graduation.

I hope that you will enjoy the opportunity to reacquaint yourselves with those who shaped your life as a Swattie through their lives as RAs, SAMs, WAs, Ninjas, Wizards, Science Associates, CAs, artists and performers, student athletes, dorm neighbors, and participants in clubs, organizations, community service projects, and activist initiatives. And let's not forget those who enriched your life as friends, reliable partners in searching discussions and debates, and late night (if not all night) study sessions. And as the spirit might move you, please do act on your impulse to reach out and reconnect with your former classmates as well as your alma mater. You truly were cared about during your time as a student — and you are cared for and missed even now.

Sincerely,

Jim Larimore
Dean of Students

Commencement

"Whenever there is a discrepancy between the way you value yourself and the way others value you, always go with the higher."

"No matter what you say or do to me, I am still a worthwhile person."

"So, yes, start an IRA, max out your 401K, keep your insurance up to date. But sometimes it's worth taking a plunge, especially when we move beyond investment policy into the area of career and relationships."

Robert Gross '62 (Last Collection)

"LET'S LEAP! AND HOLD THE NET!"

Jennie Keith (Baccalaureate Address)

"But I want to say to you that as I look out on this sea of caps and gowns, perhaps it is not that we aren't ready for the world.....perhaps it is the world which is not ready for Swarthmore."

Eva Holman '07

"Given who you are, your independent understanding of moral strength, your awareness of what confrontation and the assertion of power cannot buy, your recognition of the foundations of human commonality and remarkable ability to build upon it, and your experience of a community that seeks outreach over confrontation, I ask you, on whatever path you take, whenever you responsibly can, turn from confrontation, reach for and inspire others to reach for, our shared humanity. I could not be more confident in the leadership you will each bring to this, the most important challenge of our time."

Alfred H. Brown

"So what I wish for you - the members of the Swarthmore Class of 2007 - are three things: that you take the risk of making real the ideas and dreams that you have in your heads; that you ask the help of your friends and families in making them happen; and that you keep your learning curves steep! And, as you embark on this next chapter of risk taking, learning, and exploration - don't forget to write your thank you notes."

Marcia A. Grant '60

"Join our education insurgency."

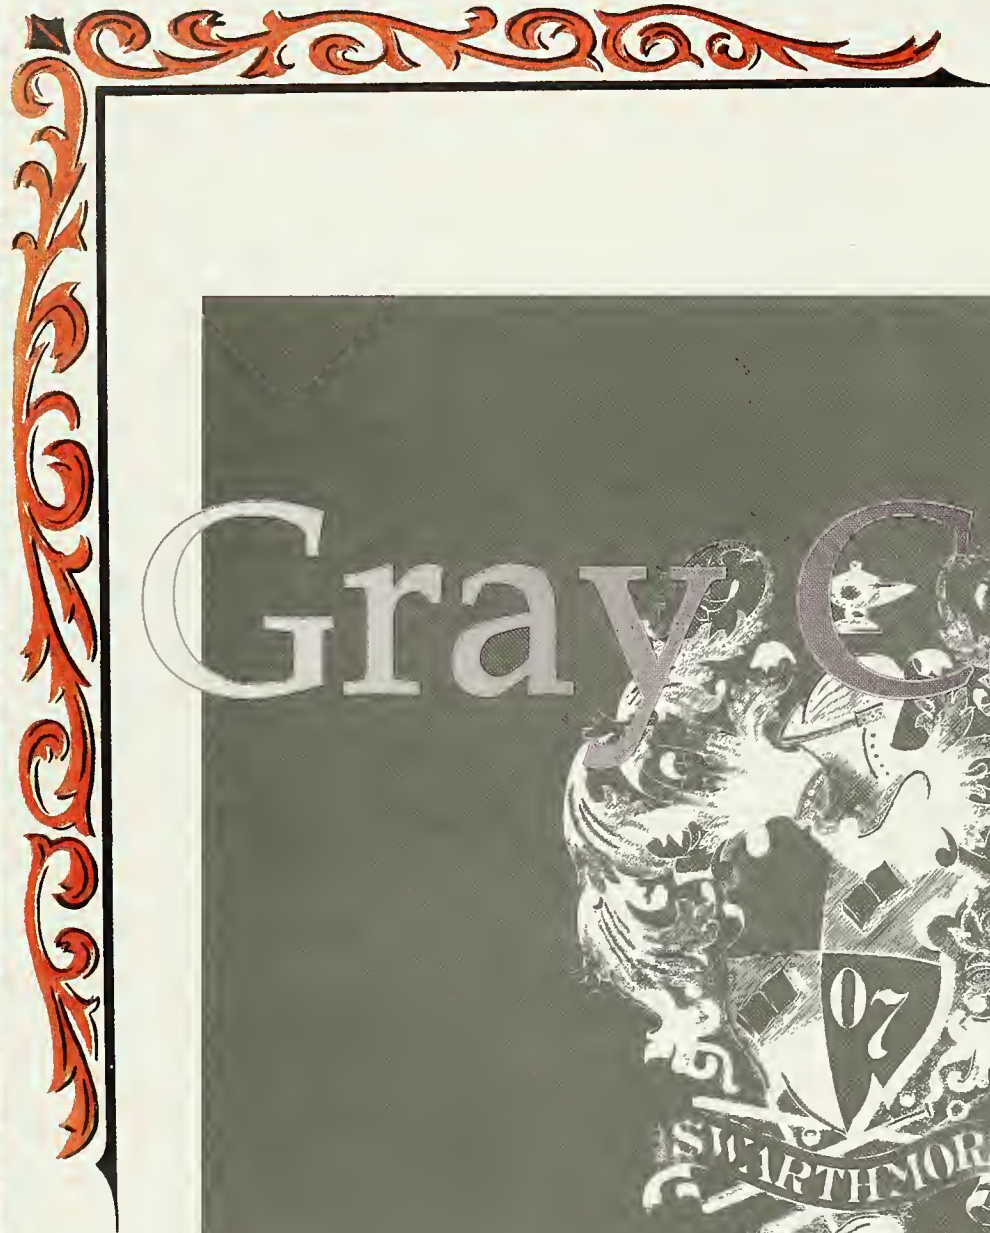

Robert Charles Moses

"You will never find a finer group of people than those you are with today. Treasure them and keep them close."

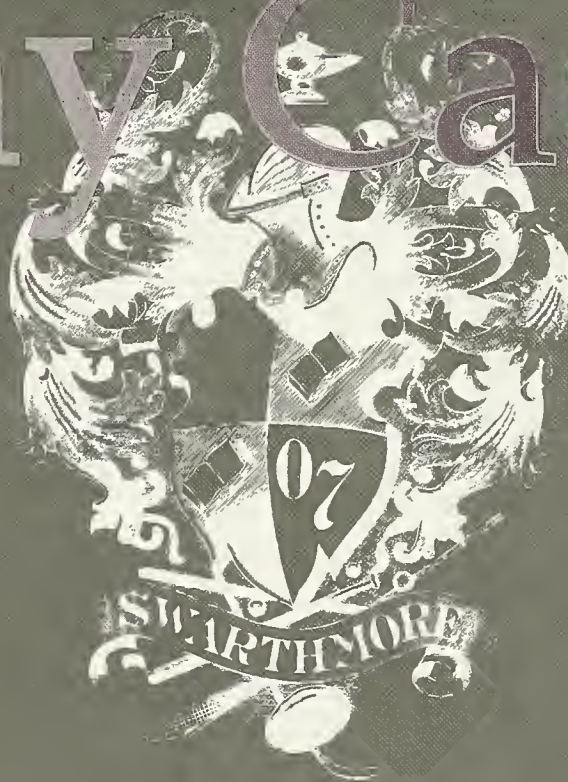

Richard S. Prichard '71
